

To Senators on the Senate Select Committee on Climate Policy,

One of the many reasons I voted for the ALP in the last election was for their commitment to a Climate Change Policy. After all the hype that came from the Garnaut report I was expecting great things and have been utterly disgusted with the wishy washy, pathetic target of a 5% reduction in carbon emissions.

As much as I hated and despised John Howard at least he was honest about his sceptism on Climate Change. It is hard for me to use the word honest in the same sentence as the name John Howard but we did at least know that he had no intention of doing anything meaningful about climate change. I am bitterly disappointed with the governments efforts so far on this vital policy. If you want my vote in the next election you are going to have to do alot better than 5%.
