

To Senators on the Senate Select Committee on Climate Policy,

I want to bring my children into a country that is doing all it can to make their futures a happy one.

The 'better than nothing' idea is ridiculous. So little from a plan like this does little to say that we truly value the land that we call Australia. We have been called a lucky country but we are surrounded by oceans and with the rising sea levels and melting polar caps we are a nation that will be affected. Our low lying islands along the coast will cease to be and become beauties of the past. We have already destroyed the rainforest by chopping down the trees and destroyed millions of the homes of wildlife for our own selfish purposes.

Take a serious cut the emissions we are putting out. Do better than nothing do something powerful and allow our children and our children's children to explore the world in all its natural wonder and glory.

Sincerely,
A concerned resident of Australia
Emily Barker