

To whom it may concern:

I call on the Government to change Australia's 2020 emissions reduction target of 5-15% to at least 40-50% by 2020.

There are many other concerns with this legislation but I am of the view that most of these will be diminished were the target to be lifted.

I could even see that were the government to negotiate a level of 15% as a base (rather than 5%) with a flow on up to 40% over time, in order to get the legislation through the Senate, that this could start the process in a way that convinces me that we might be able to move on swiftly enough. Time of course is the unknown terrorist here.

Thank you
