

I am a grandmother of six. I moved to this country over 31 years ago to make a better life for my twins who were then 7 years of age . We as Australians are proud for the quality of life we have in this country and our children have flourished in this privileged land of ours. However it saddens me to see the gradual decline in ethical and moral standards in the way children are bombarded by the different aspect of the media. We don't have to be reminded that children are our future. But what guidance are we giving them when we are giving them these constant confusing messages. I am not a prude but our moral and ethical bar is going lower and lower as far as our responsibility to our children is concerned. I have great faith in Kevin Rudd and I know he will save us all from this slippery slope.

Dhree Raniga