

Dear Sir

This is not about affordability it's about bringing as many people and businesses on board as possible.

We are told we must all contribute to using renewable energy, yet this government must put its money where it's mouth is and scrap the means test and encourage ALL Australians to change and install solar technology.

Global warming is a very serious debate so come get with it and let us all be contributing to the reduction of harmful greenhouse gases.

The means test must be scrapped and the rebate be extended beyond the 1kw system. This will reduce the demand on the coal fired power stations dramatically.

It should be compulsory for every new home built Australia wide to have, at a minimum, a solar hot water system and 1kw solar panels installed.

Gerard Collins