

I believe the above limitation is short sighted in that it reduces the market for solar PV electricity thus reducing the market growth in this industry with its potential for reduced cost due to increased item production, it also reduces the potential effect on greenhouse emission for power energy.

The customer potential for the "low income" bracket of the population would of itself be limited purely by the fact that they have a "low income".

Yours Sincerely

Kevin R Buck