

Are ordinary Australians even aware that Senator Brown has submitted this Bill? Why has there been no fanfare or publicity?

How can there be a Bill when republicans have not even agreed on a model for any republic?

Many Australians would not be aware of what a plebiscite is or does. I personally was not aware that our government could even do such a thing. Plus I am not aware of any plebiscite being conducted in our country.

Why not a referendum? Are republicans too scared it will fail . . . again?

Republicans have already wasted millions of tax payers money at the time when our schools, hospitals, government services are all crying out for more money and you want to add to the cost?

Our system of government works well and I am dismayed to see what republicans will do to destroy it as they seem so determined to do, time and again. The whole thing stinks of underhandedness, desperation and indeed republic by stealth.

yours sincerely

Kristian Becker