

Dear Senate Inquiry - Shared Parental Responsibility Bill 2005

This is a my submission to the Senate Inquiry into the provisions of the Family Law Amendment (Shared Parental Responsibility) Bill 2005

To whom it may concern, I would like to put my view accross to the senate in regards to the shared parental responsibility bill, We live in a world that is progressivley becoming more impersonal tv, radio, internet etc has become the object of focus for many people. People are loosing the ability to communicate and relate on a personal level, and have become more focused on serving themselves rather than serving family, friends and comunity. Love between people has become very conditional "I will serve you if you serve me or I will love you depending on the amount you love me ". This is the conditioning of todays society and with the presest laws rules etc this will continue and love will become less and less, we have forgotten how to give and expect to recieve, you only have to look at what is going on in the world at the moment with so many wars so much greed. Children are the future of the condition of the human race. Children have one thing adults tend to loose as they are subject to there desires and the conditioning of society and that is unconditional love. By not allowing the love of both parents to flow equally and allowing them to both spend the time with there children to show them how much they are loved we are teaching them how to be lovers in the conditional sense and so the cycle of conditional love continues to mould our society. Please consider this argument, the world needs less selfishness in order for things in society and love for one another to change and grow

respectivley yours
Rob Oakley

Thank you for reading my submission

Name: Rob Oakley
Postal Address: Frankston