

I speak for many friends that believe Marriage should stay defined as it is yet same sex partners deserve recognition and ceremony.

The issue is simple.

The term marriage has been used for years as a union between man and women – look at the bible.

Let religion keep this definition which means a lot to a lot of people.

We also believe in equal rights so also allow same sex partners to get all the same rights.

2 ways to do this.

New term – like civil union. Same sex partners can have a civil union ceremony which law recognises and they get the same rights as married couple which law recognizes.

Everyone should be happy with that. Religious people who want to keep Marriage as defined for a long time and same sex couple who want to have a ceremony and get equal rights.
