

To Whom It May Concern,

I wish to declare my support for the traditional view of marriage. That is, that marriage is a covenantal bond of love and commitment between a man and a woman to the exclusion of all others for life. Marriage is a one on one monogamous relationship, where each commits to the other to keep themselves exclusively for the other. Homosexual "marriage" is the complete antithesis of this definition, as the homosexual lifestyle is characterised by rampant promiscuity, with little to no regard to longevity of relationship and unconditional love. These relationships are also by nature very violent, non productive and harbourers of many incurable sexually transmitted diseases. In a free society, these people are free to live their self destructive lifestyles, but they do not fit the definition of marriage. They can call it something else!

Regards,
Lou d'Alpuget