

To the Senate Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee,

I utterly oppose the Marriage Equality Bill 2009.

It would completely change the meaning marriage has held throughout history and would only further help to erode traditional family values and what this nation was/is/will be built on.

Marriage is also vitally important for the raising of well rounded children (emotionally, physically, spiritually); children who need both a real female mum and a real male dad.

And this is not taking into account the negative social and health issues that would escalate...
