Subject: 'Marriage Equality' Redefinition of the Marriage Act submission

NO to differently defining the Marriage Act

Marriage is between a man and a woman the product of which is children.

We can choose not to go the way nature intended and have sex with anyone or thing, but this does not make it right (as proven by the diseases caused and caught) and doesn't mean we should include marriage to anyone or thing you might care to have sex with, in the Marriage Act.

Marriage is a contract (in the old days a blood covenant or contract) between the male and female with the product of which being children.

We give you this submission as a NO or negative to changing the marriage act to redefine it in anyway outside this definition

Regards
