

Parliament of Australia
Senate
10/08/2009

Australia shouldn't acknowledge homosexual relationships as marriage because marriage is all about family and a fundamental family is about mum and dad having children. Marriage forms a generational family heritage that children can follow back through time to grand parents to great grand parents and so on. It's far bigger than just two people; it's about the foundation of our society, the family. I believe recognizing same sex marriages will erode what marriage and family is all about.

Regards