I personally think that it is appalling that it has taken this long for this to even be considered, I may only just be 18 but I have already seen enough to know that restricting marriages to Heterosexual couples has hurt so many. My sister is Bisexual and because of that she had to deal with my parents and convince them that what she was going through was normal, then she has to deal with the everyday person thinking that what she is doing is sinful, just because some religions believe that it should not be done but why should so many suffer because of them. I think that once we allow same sex marriage, maybe more people would accept homosexual or bisexual people for who they are. That is why I think that it should be allowed.
