Subject: Carbon Sinks

To Whom it may concern, it has come to my attention that there was a bill about to be passed that appeared fairly vague as to the use of carbon sinks. It appears that the legislation about to be passed had no mention of the fact that once tree planting was offset against polluter's emissions, there was no legislation to require that these trees be maintained for a carbon sink. If this is the case then the legislation is ripe for abuse and would have no meaning. I hope that the inquiry finds that legislation should and must be changed in order for carbon sinks to remain just that.

Sincerely

Antony Partos
