Dear Sir/Madam

The older I become the more difficult it is to make sense out of food labelling.
It seems that none can be trusted.

Is it in your power to enforce a National Standard of animal derived products.?

Years ago it was no problem but greed has taken over.

As an 80 y.o. had I been invited to the recent summit I would have suggested ridding the country of State Govts and creating National Standards instead of each State doing its own thing.

We are one country - we should be united and a priority given to making it clear to consumers what they are purchasing.
